

Req id	Type	Description	Priority	Acceptance criteria	Rationale	Comments
FR-001	Functional	The system shall allow a software engineer to create and configure feature flags	High	When valid flag details are submitted, the system creates the flag and displays it in the feature-flag list.	Core functionality for controlling features.
FR-002	Functional	The system shall allow a Release Manager to enable or disable a feature flag for a specified environment.	High	When a Release Manager changes the flag status, the selected environment reflects the new status.	Enables controlled feature releases.
FR-003	Functional	The system shall allow authorized users to modify dynamic configuration values without changing application code.	High	When a valid configuration value is saved, the new value is displayed and available to the selected environment	Allows runtime configuration changes.
FR-004	Functional	The system shall allow users to view the current status and configuration of feature flags across environments.	Medium	Selecting an environment displays all its feature flags with their current status and configuration .	Helps users monitor deployments .

Req id	Type	Description	Priority	Acceptance criteria	Rationale	Comments
FR-005	Functional	The system shall record an audit entry whenever a feature flag or configuration is created, modified, enabled, or disabled.	Medium	Each change produces an audit entry containing the user, action, and timestamp.	Provides traceability and accountability.	Provides traceability and accountability.
NFR-001	Nonfunctional	The system shall apply a feature-flag or configuration change within 5 seconds of a successful update.	High	A timing test shows that at least 95% of valid updates are reflected within 5 seconds.	Ensures configuration changes take effect quickly.
NFR-002	Nonfunctional	The system shall restrict feature-flag and configuration changes to authenticated and authorized users.	High	An unauthorized user attempting a modification is denied access in 100% of test cases.	Prevents unauthorized production changes.	